Your first 30 days

Four weeks, in order. Each week builds on the one before it.

01 Week 1: measure.

Calculate revenue per subscriber and write it down. Run the 80/20 audit on last month. Sort your list into VIP, repeat, one-time and lurkers, and stop sending to lurkers. Turn off social media DMs, where the conversion is near zero and the legal risk isn't.

02 Week 2: fix the ladder.

Archive anything sellable off your free wall. Make sure your escalation has four rungs. Rebuild the tip menu to six items with a decoy at the top and your target offer in the middle. Raise your prices, and tell your best spenders before you do it, not after.

03 Week 3: build the assets.

Shoot and sequence one 20 to 30 piece narrative folder. Batch and queue a month of wall content in a single day. Write your voice and boundaries sheet. Start attaching notes to every fan who tells you anything about himself.

04 Week 4: run the system.

Put the weekly grid from section 6 into your calendar. Work the last thirty buyers with a follow-on offer. Send a reactivation batch to everyone expired in the last 90 days. Set up the three-touch follow-up on your next PPV.

Then recalculate revenue per subscriber and compare it to the number you wrote down in week one.

If you'd rather not run all of this yourself

We work directly with creators, which is why our rates are lower than the agencies reselling freelancers.

You can hand over the inbox only, or the whole account. You can take a few shifts a week or full 24/7 coverage, and start small and expand later.

What we guarantee is the operation behind your account: a trained office-based team, documented voice and boundaries, live supervision, conversation reviews, structured shift handovers, controlled account access, and clear reporting. Your account, your content, your fan relationships and your payouts stay yours. We invoice separately.

TO GET A PROPOSAL, TELL US

- Which platform you're on
- Whether you handle the inbox yourself or already have help
- Roughly what you're earning per month

Rough answers are fine. You do not need to send your password, your content, or account access.
